Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 23 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Cloudy, cold and damp with some hill snow.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloudy cold and damp during the evening and overnight, with intermittent and mostly light rain at low levels, as the Pennines see fleeting spells of snow. Low cloud is likely to be extensive given the light winds. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Friday:
Cloudy cold and damp, with extensive low cloud and light winds. Spells of rain perhaps becoming a little heavier and more extensive later, with spells of snow on hills. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Relatively high uncertainty. Probably cold but brightening up Christmas Day, as early damp and hill snow clear south, ahead of a probable northward return of these conditons from Boxing Day.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.